Physiotherapy is an important part of the management of most musculoskeletal conditions. A referral is a key element in the management of patients with musculoskeletal conditions. There are frequent problems arising from inappropriate referrals to physiotherapy services. To examine the appropriateness of referrals from medical staff to physiotherapy services in a tertiary referral hospital. The research was a retrospective chart audit of referral letters for physiotherapy services at a tertiary teaching hospital from May 2007 to May 2008. There were 844 referrals by medical staff to physiotherapy services in the study period. In all, 36% of referrals were inappropriate. Reasons for inappropriate referrals included the absence of a clear indication (63.0%), inadequate and/or conflicting referral information (25.6%), and a lack of validation of referral information (6.3%). Referrals for investigations, joint injections, and for tests of strength and endurance were most likely to be inappropriate. The use of physiotherapy services by medical staff is more appropriate than previously believed. Reasons for inappropriate referrals include lack of validation of the referral information, inadequate and/or conflicting referral information, and an absence of a clear referral indication. This may lead to patients receiving physiotherapy services unnecessarily.Q: PHP: How to use POST variables in a function? I'm new to PHP, as I'm not used to using functions in my code. I'm trying to make a very simple image upload form. What I am trying to do is Use PHP to grab an img src="" into a variable $image_src. Output that var with a and then call a function that saves the image to my server (for further use). I know how to do step 1, 2 is where I'm stuck. Can somebody help me out with this? Form:
